I want to redirect users to an external website if their input is invalid. The concept is this: I have a form with some input, and that's it. I want to check if the user's input is invalid (not matching) and if so, redirect them to an external URL (to check again). There is no issue with my app, or the app's logic, but I have no idea on how to do the redirect. When I make a request to my API, it returns a JSON object with the key "is_valid", which is a Boolean. When the value is false, the request fails. How do I make the user go to a different URL? Below are a few snippets of my code. This is the form I have. render() { const { errors, error } = this.props; return ( { errors && ( {errors.map(error => {error 5b5f913d15
