Boyce What to do when school ends: teen work study June 1, 2011 Share This Copy Link Night Reading Adjust Text Size A A A B B B C C C I I I J J J C C C SC SC SC Senior year of high school is approaching quickly. What are your plans for when the year-end parties end and you are forced to sit around and do absolutely nothing? A friend of mine set up a teen work study program at her high school. I know you're still at school. I know your social life isn't over. But if you just barely can hack it through another month or so, come back to me. I'll have more than enough stuff for you to do. You've seen this before. Maybe you're in a smaller high school or you work with older teens, but at some point, I guarantee that when things end for you on a Friday, you just want to play video games or watch TV or flop around in bed. But you're feeling a little guilty for slacking off, so you get out of bed and head to the library or a computer room at the school to get some work done. And you just stare at the screen and think about how you can't wait to make a few new friends or go see a movie that you've already seen on DVD three times. Okay, that part isn't true 77a5ca646e
