Kobe's the one who's stayed healthy. The two-time champion has played in every game for the Lakers since the 2005-06 season and he's been strong as ever, averaging 26 points and four assists per game. Jordan, for his part, is hanging on to his No. 23 jersey, even though he's played in just six of L.A.'s 12 games. He's averaging 7.5 points and shooting a meager 33.3 percent. The 42-year-old retires Friday after 22 seasons with the Bulls. These two never got a chance to go head-to-head, but when they did, Bryant clearly won in each matchup. In his first matchup, in the 1998-99 All-Star game, Jordan dominated the event. The two-time champion collected 73
