If you like what I am doing here you can check out my own channel and buy me a coffee: The video above will make sense to anyone who has ever wondered why footballers cannot move their legs. It shows the elasticity and responsiveness of skeletal muscles. It shows the challenges of recording an important game in a 3D format, even with a professional camera. It tells you why we had to go to Wembley to get this shot: Still, it's really good, and while not an improvement over the last one, this is probably one of the most exciting things to happen in the world of YouTube gaming over the past year. June 5, 2013 Video Game Benchmarks Rise on iPad 29% of consumers who play online games use the tablet computer; $108 million is spent on video games in 2013 Video game player and sales and distribution firm SuperData estimates the video game industry is a $102.7 billion business. It says $51.3 billion is spent on "hardcore games," which are those played primarily by a dedicated audience, and "casual games," which are played by the general public. There are 110.6 million "hardcore" gamers, who "make up 29% of consumers with access to an internet connection," says the firm. Casual gamers number 69.8 million, and they make up 76% of all Internet users. The report notes that 65% of gamers are male, and there is a "greater" female following than male gamers. It also says that the average gamer spends $108 on games in 2013. This reflects a 16% rise from 2012, according to a survey of 5,000 U.S. consumers who are also available in the report. The study doesn't distinguish between hardcore gamers and casual ones, but does say that males are much more involved than females in "hardcore games," at 90% versus 77%. Women spend more than men in both "casual games" and "other," but men still spend more. In the "

What's new:

2011-02-08 by Animal Studies Research Centre, Department of Rehabilitation Medicine, University of Alberta This is the long-awaited answer to the years long debate between players of the Dissection Simulator board game and dissection fans! This new edition of Dissection Simulator features three new breeds: the wild-caught Norwegian Forest cat, the rare Texas Longhorn, and the apestorm infested Australian Malamute. Each breed can be mixed and matched to solve board puzzles and complete the 41 level Dissection Simulator board game. Some of the levels are inspired by popular Dissection Simulator levels, such as the Level in the Ass that requires players to explore a blue-robed gentleman's bedroom with his brightly colored money. Every wild-caught cat may also be purchased from the untamed wilderness and players may use their hard-earned cash to feed and groom them to have them perform feats of interest to the Dissection Simulator fan. Additional purchasable items include cross-breed mixes, catnip, brushes, food (separately from the free players feed), pills and other bits and bobs which may be used to feed, groom, train, and play with these wondrous new creatures. This version contains all of the features of the original, first edition game including the stuffed-in dissection details of many mammals and birds. A new level is added, the dissection of the Moonraker, inspired by the dissection of the famous fictional launch from the first James Bond movie, Dr. No. Arthropod Bonanza The mammals, birds, reptiles and amphibians of Dissection Simulator make way for larger, more varied arthropods. These new game pieces include a blood-sucking leech, a decapitating butterfly, and a life-threatening black widow spider. Dissection Simulator FAQs Q: Will my Dissection Simulator game boards work with all of the Dissection Simulator expansions? A: No. The animal species will be presented on the same species game boards as the original Dissection Simulator game. The Dissection Simulator: Mammalian Edition will use the (2) mammals game boards, the Dissection Simulator: Reptilian Edition will use the (2) reptiles game boards, and the Dissection Simulator: Arthropod Edition will use the (2) arthropods game boards. Q: Will my Dissection Simulator game boards fit all of the Dissection Simulator expansion pieces
