(Photo: Asianewsphoto) Bangkok: Thai security forces detained over 40 activists in a march against a military-drafted constitution Sunday, said the co-ordinator of the rally, which organisers say is the largest of its kind in Thailand's history. Security forces blocked the activists from marching towards Bangkok's Democracy Monument at the end of a day of protest. Over 40 activists were detained Sunday evening after marching to the Thai capital's Democracy Monument. The March on Bangkok organised by four major trade unions and several activists involved in the country's protests against a military-drafted constitution, was the largest gathering in the capital since protesters rallied over a month ago against a government draft. At least one protester has died and scores have been injured since demonstrations against a new constitution began in mid-May. The unrest has posed major problems for the country's prime minister and the military that has the power to call an early election in the country's politically split nation. The draft constitution, a product of a Sept. 19-20 referendum, has a third of seats in parliament reserved for military appointees and a significant degree of control by the junta. After protesters chanted anti-military slogans and demanded early elections, security forces responded with tear gas. Thailand's Senate on Sunday began debating the constitution. The Senate, also appointed by the junta, began its meeting to discuss the issue after tens of thousands of protesters were dispersed by security forces Sunday evening. The Senate will also vote on the article that defines what an "undemocratic state" is, and whether it should be revised to include a period of preventive detention. The activists called for both the Senate and the prime minister to resign. Thailand has been unstable since a military coup in May 2014, which removed former Prime Minister Yingluck Shinawatra and her brother, ousted as the opposition leader the next day. Since then, Yingluck's sister, Thaksin Shinawatra, a populist former prime minister who is also a former business tycoon, has remained on the run after being convicted of corruption. A court in absentia sentenced Thaksin to five years in prison in December, based on a ruling by the Supreme Court that he had failed to turn up to answer corruption

07/20/2007 Must recharge 5 Power. May not be used in conjunction with the Hedron Guard (other than to block fire) or, to a lesser extent, the Solar Beam (other than to neg 0 the damage of non-powered-up X-Bows). Mainly aimed at those deckbuilders who are in need of burn. Superhero-X DIPLEXED 1.00 ICE: All Superhero-X is the strongest blaster that has ever been made. The man behind this was Dr. Harmell Embryo, but he lost his mind when he realized he could make the strongest blasters humanity ever created. So he killed himself and slept for a trillion years. But still, his work remains, for those who dare delve into the magic of darkness. The bread and butter of the X-Bow set, Superhero-X has a multitude of applications and should probably be your first line of defence against evil all year round. With Superhero-X, you have the power to turn 1 ship or 1 deck of cards into any number of powerful mobs. Or to put it into the terms of your friend Mr. Money, you can make your money go a lot farther, and he will love it! Unfortunately, Superhero-X is not for the faint of heart, and it has a long list of red flags. Big explosion, cannot be changed to ANY ship, must consume power, etc... but this is what makes Superhero-X great. Its special tarot cards represent a tie between the 'Devil' and the 'DARK TRUTH' and are the only cards that require you to consume a measurable amount of power to use, making them the ultimate Dark Truths. All ships in the X-Bow Core Set are incapacitated for 1 turn if you control both Superhero-X and, well, just about anything. Perhaps you could even deck out an X-Bow with a bunch of Neutron-Powered Missile Launchers? No... I don't think so. That's violent. Flash Cards:

Superhero-X is the only card that benefits from a Flash Card and is affected by Chaos, Creation or Time Reversal. Superhero-X's single target attack is a typically card-breaking "10 Damage" (actually 14 damage when viewed from the end-of-turn face of Super
