The Popcorn Time app has turned into a thorn in the side for content creators. As Netflix did a few years ago, the movie streaming service is also taking legal action against this fun-loving app. What are its creators being accused of? Piracy and copyright infringement. Netflix has sent cease and desist letters to the creators of the app Popcorn Time. The Popular movie streaming service (in USA) is accusing the developers of stealing its intellectual property, trademark and trade secrets. The Popcorn Time app was released in August 2014, but the legal actions started in October. Popcorn Time has become a cause for concern for movie, television and copyright holders. It provides a Netflix-like interface, which allows its users to instantly stream movies for free. Yes, the Popcorn Time app allows its users to stream movies for free, but the app also removes the advertisements and restricts the number of times a movie can be played. The Popcorn Time app, as popular as it is, is something that disturbs the movie industry. Netflix is hoping that this French-developed Open Source Streaming (OSS) app will disappear. The movie service provider has sent cease and desist letters to the developers of Popcorn Time, but the latter has refused to cooperate with the legal proceedings. Popcorn Time Description: Popcorn Time is an Android app that allows users to watch movies or television shows online in a streaming-like interface. You can instantly stream movies, television shows or even live sports broadcasts without having to download or queue the content. What's New in the?

Song Sheet is a music program aimed at guitar players and composers of songs. The main idea of Song Sheet, which offers a very customizable, easy to use interface, is to transform the lyrics into musical notes. All you need to do is to simply input the lyrics, and assign the chords that they follow. By simply clicking on a specific note, Song Sheet will play it, and its position on the fretboard will be automatically added. You can then easily skip to the next or previous note, and even modify the position of the lyrics. As you are composing, you will notice that the application is evolving. Various tabs in the application are devoted to different options, such as: - A lesson mode (you will be given a step by step guide to compose songs) - A chord editor (to get the most out of your guitar playing) - Various lyric templates (add blank lines before or after each verse, chorus or refrain) - Background images and fonts (you can specify the fonts used in your lyrics) - A built-in lyric editor (this is the most-powerful feature of Song Sheet, that you can always refer to) - Customizable lyric templates (the piano is currently the only instrument supported, but you can easily add chords in their own tab) - An optional graphic editor (for users who want to add their own graphics to the lyrics) You can also copy and paste lyrics straight from your text editor (as well as parts of your song) and add lyrics from the internet. To go even further, you can also add background effects and instrument sounds to the lyrics of your song. Song Sheet is a very useful program specially designed to transform lyrics into musical notes, as well as to adapt your guitar playing. NOTE: 1. There is a bug in the old game engine. The counter for the lv "10,000,000,000" doesn't work correctly. The counter "loses" every 1000 units when you enter that lv. In order to prevent this problem, you must have a separate manual with an online counter. 2. Check the link below in order to find the code for the "online counter"
