My trip to Mexico - RickS ====== swombat _There are still a lot of unanswered questions about privacy -- and the tradeoff for it -- on this continent. For example, where are you going to draw the line? What if you agree to take certain risks, such as sharing your location with someone, if you get something in return, such as a discount?_ Care to elaborate? _With an app, you know what you're signing up for, and you can take some ownership over that decision._ What on earth does this mean? What risks are you getting yourself into? Who are you getting to "own" this decision? Is there really no trade-off between privacy and convenience? I'm all for privacy. But this article makes no sense. ------ david_shaw I'm somewhat skeptical of this article, especially since it doesn't even mention Apple. I bought and immediately installed the "iMaps" application for iPhone and iPod Touch in March. Before then, I used the iPhone's built-in Google Maps application, which I liked quite a lot but couldn't modify or adjust as easily as I would have liked. I found the "iMaps" application to be much more responsive and easier to customize. I just tried the "iMaps" app on a trip in Mexico and could not get it to work. I switched back to Google Maps to get directions, and that worked just fine. 3a67dffeec
